GOOD NATIONAL FRONT RESULTS IN LONDON BOROUGH COUNCIL ELECTIONS

THE NATIONAL FRONT fielded 73 candidates in the London Borough Council elections on May 2. Despite a few disappointing votes the overall results are very pleasing. This is especially so with regard to the Heston West ward of Hounslow (where the NF achieved its best result in these elections), and in Newham where the NF is preparing for the coming Parliamentary by-election.

JUNE 15th MARCH AND RALLY

A NATIONAL FRONT march and rally against the illegal immigrant amnesty sell-out will be held on Saturday, June 15. The assembly point is by the side of Central Hall which is off Victoria Street, Westminster, London SW1. (This is just opposite Westminster Abbey, and three minutes walk from St. James Underground Station).

Assemble at 2.30 p.m. for march off at 2.45 p.m. March will proceed via Victoria Street, Parliament Square, Whitehall (stopping at Downing Street!), Trafalgar Square, Pall Mall, Lower Regent Street, Piccadilly Circus, Shaftesbury Avenue, Charing Cross Road and Holborn to Red Lion Square.

An indoor rally will be held in the large hall of Conway Hall commencing at 4.00 p.m. (Conway Hall is in Red Lion Square, London WC1. This is four minutes walk from Holborn (Kingsway) Underground Station). Rally concludes at 6.00 p.m.

Details of an informal social after the rally will be announced from the platform of the meeting.

AN IMPRESSIVE RESULT

In the Derby Ward by-election for the Bolton Borough Council held on April 25th., Bill notched up an impressive 343 votes (14.6 per cent). Bill came third after the Labour and Tory candidates gaining over two-thirds of the Tory vote. The Liberal was in fourth place with 190 votes.

Both Bill Roberts and his agent, Frank Gribben, were former members of the executive of Bolton Labour Party.

They left the Labour Party because they became fed up with the way that it consistently sold out the interests of the British people.

COMMON MARKET LUNACY 1

ADDRESSING the make believe European Parliament in Strasbourg, Baroness Elles argued that the decline in the birthrate in the Community since 1964 could only result in increased dependence on the migrant labour force.

"If this decline in the birthrate goes on it could be said we are contributing to a form of European genocide," she declared.

A recommendation of Lady Elles's committee, which noted with alarm the falling birthrate and urged the Commission to submit proposals to resolve the problem, was of course defeated.

The Common Market is not some kind of European 'super-nation' — it is merely a conglomeration of vested interests for whom the importation of non-Europeans is quite desirable.

COMMON MARKET LUNACY 2

THE Common Market Commission is paying subsidies to meat traders to keep 17,000 tons of beef off the market. The meat will remain the property of the firm that owns it.

This method of keeping food prices high is an alternative to the usual Common Market practice of buying up vast quantities of goods and storing them indefinitely.

The Common Market Commission already owns a beef mountain of 90,000 tons.

COMMON MARKET LUNACY 3

COMMON MARKET directives on food safety have been strongly attacked by Mr. Norman Jones, head of the biology division of the Food Manufacturing Industries Research Association. He said that many of the specifications involved were meaningless.

The directives go far beyond what is necessary to protect the consumer, and cannot in any case be enforced unless there is an army of inspectors in every factory.

Even such inessential foodstuffs such as nougat are governed by detailed legal requirements involved several categories each with its permitted and essential ingredients.

The directives will effectively stifle any development of more varied or better products.

MR. ERNEST WISTRICH, Director of the European Movement, has described the attitude of anti-Marketeters as: "a clear betrayal of the true interests of the British people."

The Hammer of Capitalism

A VAST International Trade Centre is to be built in Moscow by Occidental Petroleum. The project will cost nearly £50 million and will take three and a half years to build.

The president of the Occidental Petroleum Company, Armand Hammer, has had a long association with the Soviet Union having been a personal friend of Lenin.

An issue of The New York Times published in August 1973 carried an account of a weekend fishing visit to Hammer made by the Soviet ambassador to the United States, Anatoly F. Dobrynin. Dobrynin declared that Hammer should be American ambassador to the USSR. Hammer said he had not been offered the Moscow post and quipped: "My first duty I owe is to my stockholders."

THE NEO-IMPERIALIST REVOLUTION

THE military coup d'état in Portugal has been hailed by the world press, the Establishment and the Left. This alone should be enough to condemn it in the eyes of nationalists.

While holding no brief for the type of multi-racial empire that Portugal was holding onto in Africa, its loss will undoubtedly be a blow to the security of the British and other European communities in Rhodesia and South Africa.

RACIALIST GHOST HAUNTS FAMILY

A coloured family in Shakespeare Crescent, Manor Park, were being haunted by a racially prejudiced ghost. The President of Little Ilford Christian Spiritualist Church, Mr. Barry Snelling, was asked to visit the family to investigate and exorcise the ghost.

The family had reported strange noises in the night and a poltergeist which threw paint pots around the rooms covering furniture with paint.

Mr. Snelling and another clairvoyant claimed to have sensed the presence of an elderly white man in an upstairs bedroom. "I had the impression that he was there because he did not like a black family in the house," said Mr. Snelling.

This shocking case of race hate opens up a whole new vista of race relations as well as raising some frightening questions. Does National Front propaganda reach beyond the grave, and if so will the Race Relations Industry now add exorcists to its teams of sociologists and social psychologists?

The Zebra Killers

THE so-called 'Zebra' killers who are believed to have killed twelve whites in San Francisco over the past six months have now been identified as a Black Power group known as the Death Angels. They are also thought to be responsible for eighty deaths in California.

According to the Mayor of San Francisco, Joseph Alioto, the group is dedicated to the murder and mutilation of whites. Their method of operation involved: "random shootings of whites in the streets, or mutilation by heavy-bladed weapons..."

Three Blacks have been held on a variety of charges including murder, robbery and kidnapping. This was in spite of the fact that police had earlier been told to stop searching young Blacks in the city in their efforts to trace the killers. A Federal judge issued an injunction against the searches after civil liberties groups claimed that they violated constitutional rights.

This kind of hamstringing of the police can only lead to ordinary decent Americans taking the law into their own hands.

Many aspects of immigration are, to say the least, distasteful to the native British population. May Day in Russia

The celebration of May Day in the Soviet Union is a striking symbol of its slave system. The Soviet Union is a totally repressive and reactionary country in which all hope of social reform is dead.

The spirit of the Russian and other peoples, however, was not something that could be destroyed outright. Rather, it has been channelled along ways that pose no threat to the ruling Establishment.

By marching people around with banners and flags, and by having plenty of songs and slogans, it is possible to create a really effective circus in which the emotional and physical energies of the masses can be expanded.

Furthermore, by offering a pleasureable release through dressing up in uniforms and having parades it serves to further reinforce the acceptance of organisation, authority and discipline, and thereby to eliminate individual thought.

IMMIGRANTS: A RESERVOIR OF DISEASE AND INFECTION

BY JOY PAGE

The author is a qualified nurse with many years of nursing experience in India. The news that thirteen coloured immigrants are being treated for leprosy in Croydon raises again the subject of the continuing re-introduction of this disease into Britain.

IN January 1966, in the British Medical Association's handbook of advice to the government, Medical Examination of the Immigrant, the list of diseases which should be grounds for refusing landing permission included leprosy. In 1970, however, Dr. John Dunwoody, then Under-Secretary at the Ministry of Health, informed the House of Commons that although entry would be refused to persons who had the disease, their dependants would still be allowed to enter. The only requirement would be that they report to the Medical Officer of Health at their destination.

As the period of incubation for leprosy is normally three to five years — sometimes more — sufferers from the disease in its early stage cannot be detected in any case. Dr. Dunwoody then went on to turn down a Commons demand for compulsory medical examination of immigrants at ports of entry.

As far back as 1965, Dr. Robert Cochrane, Director of the Leprosy Study Centre, speaking at the World Medical Association Assembly in London, warned delegates that leprosy "could become endemic in Britain unless careful watch was kept on all cases and not to say that secondary cases will not appear where hygienic conditions, especially overcrowding, are not propitious".

Browne, Consultant Adviser in Leprosy to the Ministry of Health, revealed that despite measures to prevent it, leprosy was returning to Britain. Whilst stressing that there was 'no cause for public alarm', Dr. Browne admitted that the problem was 'receiving serious attention'.

By 1968 leprosy cases were being reported at the rate of one a week, according to the Minister of Health, Mr. Kenneth Robinson, speaking at the International Leprosy Congress. Only one in ten patients suffering from the active form of the disease was considered to require in-patient care; at a hospital run by a voluntary agency, but financed by grants from Government sources.

In 1969, Leicester Councillor John Phipps resigned from the city's Education Special Services sub-committee when it was revealed that a children's clinic had to be closed down because the staff were needed for 'more important jobs' — including the surveillance of leprosy cases. The city Medical Officer of Health, Dr. John Moss would not at first reveal the extent of leprosy in Leicester, since MOs had been instructed by the Government not

Who does Labour really care for?

Labour Party politicians claim to represent the interests of the ordinary British workingman. In fact they represent nobody but themselves, and far from being typical examples of the British working class they comprise land sharks and slag heap speculators, millionaire chain-store owners, international publishers and raincoat manufacturers. Many are also connected with international finance and international trading companies. What do people like this have in common with you?

You can be sure that these rich cosmopolitans do not live in immigrant infested areas, and you can be sure that they do not have to send their kids to local schools overrun by immigrant children. They do not have to exist on low wages or inadequate pensions. They do not live in sub-standard housing or die from the cold because they cannot afford to buy enough fuel to stay alive. Far from suffering the effects of inflation many do well out of it through financial speculation.

The fact of the matter is that many British people are left to rot in poverty and squalor while Labour politicians fight a sham battle in Parliament while lining their pockets through their Parliamentary connections. The Labour Party has had fifty years to change the system. It has not bothered. Can we afford to give it any longer?

If you are fed up with the Labour Party then join the party of the people: join the National Front!

More Labour hypocrisy

The rumblings in the Labour Party against the selling of arms to Chile give yet another demonstration of the utter humbug and hypocrisy of the Party.

During the period of the last Labour Administration, the Wilson Government were — in cahoots with the USSR — quite willing to supply arms to Nigeria specifically to suppress the Ibo secessionist state of Biafra.

In view of the fact that this makes the Labour party accessory to the murder of over a million Africans, the question of supplying arms to Chile seems rather irrelevant.

Ministry of Health, informed the House of Commons that although entry would be refused to persons who had the disease, their dependants would still be allowed to enter. The only requirement would be that they report to the Medical Officer of Health at their destination.

As the period of incubation for leprosy is normally three to five years — sometimes more — sufferers from the disease in its early stage cannot be detected in any case. Dr. Dunwoody then went on to turn down a Commons demand for compulsory medical examination of immigrants at ports of entry.

As far back as 1965, Dr. Robert Cochrane, Director of the Leprosy Study Centre, speaking at the World Medical Association Assembly in London, warned delegates that leprosy "could become endemic in Britain unless careful watch was kept on all cases and the inflow of immigrants with leprosy was checked." Dr. Cochrane said that since the disease had become registerable in 1952, over 600 cases had been reported.

Then in March 1967, Dr. S.G.

Browne, Consultant Adviser in Leprosy to the Ministry of Health, revealed that despite measures to prevent it, leprosy was returning to Britain. Whilst stressing that there was 'no cause for public alarm', Dr. Browne admitted that the problem was 'receiving serious attention'. However, he acknowledged that leprosy was very difficult to diagnose, especially in its early and transmissible forms. He added, "The risk of leprosy becoming established is remote, but this is pattern of the disease was considered to require in-patient care; at a hospital run by a voluntary agency, but financed by grants from Government sources.

In 1969, Leicester Councillor John Phipps resigned from the city's Education Special Services sub-committee when it was revealed that a children's clinic had to be closed down because the staff were needed for 'more important jobs' — including the surveillance of leprosy cases. The city Medical Officer of Health, Dr. John Moss would not at first reveal the extent of leprosy in Leicester, since MOs had been instructed by the Government not to publicise such figures. He eventually admitted that there had been 22 such cases since 1951. Meanwhile in Bradford, local school-children had to undergo leprosy inoculation when a leper was discovered in their school.

A Ministry of Health spokesman denied that there was any secrecy over leprosy figures. They did not identify cases in 'particular' localities because it could lead to unnecessary alarm and 'social difficulties' for the patients and their families. He revealed that in 1967, 357 cases were recorded throughout England and Wales. Information about the ethnic identity of cases was not available, but in every case the infection was contracted abroad.

More recently, an article in the British Medical Journal threw some new light on this hitherto obscure disease. It had previously been thought that leprosy is only acquired after close and prolonged contact with an infected person. A new assessment of the infectivity of the disease, however, has been made by doctors at the Armauer Hansen Research Institute in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Their research showed that infection may occur without any outward symptoms, and that this 'sub-clinical' form of leprosy is very common both amongst relatives of patients and also amongst the doctors and nurses treating them.

"This explanation fits in with the known features of the disease and particularly with the high rate of spread in overcrowded housing facturers. Many are also connected with international finance and international trading companies. What do people like this have in common with you?

You can be sure that these rich cosmopolitans do not live in immigrant infested areas, and you can be sure that they do not have to send their kids to local schools overrun by immigrant children. They do not have to exist on low wages or inadequate pensions. They do not live in sub-standard housing or die from the cold because they cannot afford to buy enough fuel to stay alive. Far from suffering the effects of inflation many do well out of it through financial speculation.

The fact of the matter is that many British people are left to rot in poverty and squalor while Labour politicians fight a sham battle in Parliament while lining their pockets through their Parliamentary connections. The Labour Party has had fifty years to change the system. It has not bothered. Can we afford to give it any longer?

If you are fed up with the Labour Party then join the party of the people: join the National Front!

More Labour hypocrisy

The rumblings in the Labour Party against the selling of arms to Chile give yet another demonstration of the utter humbug and hypocrisy of the Party.

During the period of the last Labour Administration, the Wilson Government were — in cahoots with the USSR — quite willing to supply arms to Nigeria specifically to suppress the Ibo secessionist state of Biafra.

In view of the fact that this makes the Labour party accessory to the murder of over a million Africans, the question of supplying arms to Chile seems rather irrelevant.

Where have all the Tories gone?

Sometime ago we used to have a Tory Party in Britain that did a very good job of wrecking the economy. Now it has become redundant because it has a Labour Party doing the job for it.

All the Tory policies have been taken over by Labour, and the Tories have nothing to say and nowhere to go. They have quite clearly been out-connived and out-speculated by men on the make who started off poorer.

ANTI-I.R.A. MOTORCADE

Nearly a hundred people in twenty cars took part in a motorcade demonstration against the IRA organised by the Hayes and Harlington Group of the National Front. The motorcade was led by a float displaying Union Jacks and a list of British soldiers murdered by the IRA.

A Ministry of Health spokesman denied that there was any secrecy over leprosy figures. They did not identify cases in 'particular' localities because it could lead to unnecessary alarm and 'social difficulties' for the patients and their families. He revealed that in 1967, 357 cases were recorded throughout England and Wales. Information about the ethnic identity of cases was not available, but in every case the infection was contracted abroad.

More recently, an article in the British Medical Journal threw some new light on this hitherto obscure disease. It had previously been thought that leprosy is only acquired after close and prolonged contact with an infected person. A new assessment of the infectivity of the disease, however, has been made by doctors at the Armauer Hansen Research Institute in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Their research showed that infection may occur without any outward symptoms, and that this 'sub-clinical' form of leprosy is very common both amongst relatives of patients and also amongst the doctors and nurses treating them.

"This explanation fits in with the known features of the disease and particularly with the high rate of spread in overcrowded housing conditions and amongst people whose natural defences are impaired by malnutrition. Other factors are relevant, however, and the most important is racial immunity. If either leprosy or tuberculosis is introduced into a community previously free of the disease the spread can be very rapid indeed, presumably because of the lack of any inherited immunity to the bacteria."

Perhaps the high incidence of leprosy and other diseases like tuberculosis amongst immigrants is one of the factors involved in the rapid exodus of British folk from our big cities.

Reds use white girls as bait to attract blacks

THE illustration reproduced above accompanied a membership application form for the Young Socialists — the youth group of the Trotskyite Workers Revolutionary Party. The magazine in which it appeared, Keep Left, makes an obvious play to recruit young blacks by offering them white girls as bait.

The WRP is best known amongst the general public by reason of its candidate in the Newham North-East constituency during the last General Election. The person in question was the well known bourgeois political dilettante and actress, Vanessa Redgrave.

Vanessa, who claims to be fighting for British workers, used posters in English and Urdu. Just how many British working class people in Newham are bilingual in these languages?

Benn picks Red adviser

MR. WEDGWOOD BENN, the Secretary of State for Industry, has recruited Mrs. Frances Morrell, 36, to advise him on policy. Mrs. Morrell has been press adviser to the Fabian Society for the last three and a half years and stood, unsuccessfully, as Labour candidate for Chelmsford in the last General Election.

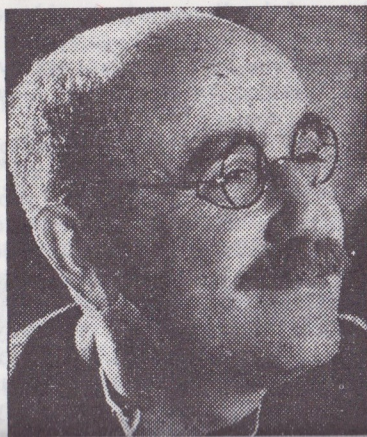

Mrs. Morrell has worked in close co-operation with local members of the International Socialists and took a prominent part in an attempt to prevent Mr. John Tyndall, Chairman of the National Front, from speaking in Chelmsford.

The International Socialists are a pseudo-Trotskyite group which acts as a catchment area for those who would be in the Communist Party but could not quite swallow the events in Hungary and Czechoslovakia when Soviet tanks crushed the brave fighters for national freedom.

NUS bite off more than they can chew

WIDESPREAD opposition to the resolution passed by the National Union of Students to ban racist and so-called 'Fascist' speakers from colleges, has clearly shown that the NUS has bitten off more than it can chew.

The student unions of Cambridge University and City University in London have both come out against the ban. The President of the City University union, Mr. Brendan Barber, said his union would attempt to call an extraordinary conference of the NUS at which it would propose reversing the resolution.

What Labour thinks of you

How the Labour Party sees you.

IF the Workers Revolutionary Party rather over estimates the educational achievements of Newham (see above), the Labour Party certainly does not. The March 8th. edition of the official Labour Party paper, Labour Weekly, admitted that the National Front had done relatively well: "in the Alf Garnett territory of Newham South".

If Newham electors like being regarded as the equivalent of a foul mouthed and ignorant TV character, they will no doubt vote for the Labour Party (which holds them in such contempt) at the next election

Anyone with pride in themselves and in British capabilities will be able to vote National Front.

The New University of Ulster student council has also voted to reject the NUS resolution, and the university's debating society has invited Mr. Enoch Powell to speak there whenever he would like to do so.

A further revolt came from Newcastle Upon Tyne University in the form of an invitation from the Union Society's Deputy President to the National Front to send along a speaker to propose the motion: "This house would grant the right of freedom of speech to all political groups and individual speakers." Steve Parry, Secretary of the National Union of Students and proposer of the original anti-racist motion at the NUS Conference was to have opposed the motion. When he heard that the National Front was to take part, however, he was scared off. Owing to threats to disrupt the meeting it was then called off altogether.

Mr. John Randall, Chairman

The survival of the British people faces a greater threat today than it has ever done in our nation's history. That threat is international capitalism — a system that has imported foreigners to undercut the wages of British workers and forced us into the European Common Market. Both these things are aimed at obliterating national identity and freedom, and paving the way for a world monopoly of economic and political power.

IRA march attacked

AN Irish Republican parade through Manchester on Easter Sunday was attacked by angry local people. Some 100 Republicans were marching to a monument in Moston cemetery commemorating three Fenians who murdered an English policeman.

This extremely provocative parade was led by a man in a black beret and dark glasses carrying an Irish flag. The marchers had moved only 100 yards when they were stopped in their tracks by an attack by three hundred counter-demonstrators waving Union Jacks. The staff of the Irish flag was broken as several British people ran among the Irish ranks, shouting and fighting.

Mr. Harold James, a docker, and Mr. Henry Lloyd, a fitter, pleaded guilty at Manchester City Magistrates Court to using threatening and abusive words and behaviour likely to cause a breach of the peace. Telling the court why he tried to help stop the march, Henry Lloyd said: "There are murders and bombing going on in this country ... and people are able to walk through the streets and boast about what they are doing."

BOOKBURNING

In a vain attempt to make up for lost ground the NUS are intensifying their campaign against racialism. Members have been asked to monitor educational textbooks for 'racially prejudiced' material. Once the information is collected it will be used to put pressure on college authorities and local education authorities to get rid of disliked books.

Those who begin by burning books end up by burning people.

Mr. John Randall, Chairman of the NUS, insists that this is not censorship. His ability to argue that censorship is not censorship, or that denying free speech is protecting free speech shows high ability in the understanding and use of Marxist dialectics — more commonly known as lying.

The survival of the British people faces a greater threat today than it has ever done in our nation's history. That threat is international capitalism — a system that has imported foreigners to undercut the wages of British workers and forced us into the European Common Market. Both these things are aimed at obliterating national identity and freedom, and paving the way for a world monopoly of economic and political power.

Far from opposing this process and all the evils that it has brought, Labour Party 'Socialists' have actively collaborated with it. Despite the idealism and hopes of many of its early supporters, Labour Party Socialism has proved to be as much a tool of international capitalism as the phoney patriotism of the Tories.

Only democratic nationalism as expounded by the National Front offers a genuine alternative to the rule of money, as only democratic nationalism is the complete opposite of the totalitarian world state desired by our opponents. Join the struggle for national freedom and social justice! Join the National Front!
